Every year on Children's Day in Japan a kite in the shape of a carp (koinobori) is flown for each boy in the family. Kimiko knows that the festival of Children's Day is celebrated by the boys of the families flying large fish kites, but as the only girl, she feels left out. A Carp for Kimiko has 21 ratings and 5 reviews. Pamela said: An intriguing first look into Japanese traditions and culture, but this one is a bit over-simplified. Every year on May 5th in Japan a kite in the shape of a carp (koinobori) is flown for each boy in the family. Kimiko is a little girl who desperately wants an orange, black, and white carp kite to fly on Children's Day, like the one little brother Yukio has, but it's not the Japanese tradition: kites are for boys. Lesson Plan: A Carp for Kimiko. Lesson Description: Through a reading of A Carp for Kimiko, students will explore the May 5th Japanese holiday, Children's Day. In this story about Japan, tradition prohibits Kimiko from flying a carp kite on Children's Day like her brother, but her parents surprise her with a gift of her own.
