Juvenile Crime in Bangladesh & the limitation of Correctional Center- A Comparative Analysis between third World & First World

Introduction:

Delinquency is a kind of abnormality. When an individual deviates from the course of normal social life, his behavior is called delinquency. This has almost become a universal problem in most of the countries including Bangladesh. Thus the term has a very extensive meaning and includes rebellious and hostile behavior of children and their attitude of indifference towards society. Certain other acts such as begging, truancy, vagrancy, obscenity, loitering, pilfering, drinking, gambling, etc. which vicious persons very often commit are also included within the meaning of the term juvenile delinquency.

There is a growing awareness among the people of the world about the problem of juvenile delinquency. Any society, undergoing changes in its structural and functional aspects is faced with the problem of dislocation and disequilibrium in the social, cultural, political and economic life of the community.

In Bangladesh have some Child Development Centers and Correctional Institutions. Their main theme is correction of juvenile delinquents & sends them to the society without any supervision. In these Child Development Centers have juvenile court, human rights officers, probation officers, social workers and others relevant department. But these Child Development Centers faces various types of limitations, like- environmental, political, organizational, administrative, and infrastructural and so on. Bangladesh is now doubt, a society in transition changing its traditional value system. An understanding of the social aspect of delinquency is imperative in order to measure in depth of the problem arising in our society.

The importance and significance of the study lies in the fact that the problem of delinquency is thwarting the socialization for our future generations. Since the problem poses a challenge to our whole society, it should be investigated empirically to know the subject of delinquency, which is social in origin, in nature and in consequence.

The study will give insight into the existing situating of Child Development Centers, its justice procedure, limitations and also the successibility of the juvenile court and correctional institutions in the context of Bangladesh. It will emphasize the limitations of Child Development Centers- a comparative analysis between third world and first world.
